BACKGROUND

Brandon Wynn is one of the fastest growing names in men's gymnastics. Having won two consecutive NCAA still rings champion titles (2010, 2011) and the 2010 and 2011 U.S. Championship still rings crown, Brandon is a strong contender for a spot on the 2012 Olympic team.

Affectionately dubbed "Lord of the Rings," Wynn won the 2010 NCAA rings title. Before winning his first national title, he claimed the 2010 Big Ten rings championship. Brandon earned All-America status for the first time in 2009 after finishing eighth all-around at the NCAA Championships.

Wynn had a summer to remember in 2010 after claiming the rings national title at the U.S. National Championships, becoming the first Buckeye to take the rings title since 2004. In the all-around competition, Wynn finished third overall, the highest mark by an active NCAA student-athlete. With his performance, Wynn was named to his second U.S. national team and his first U.S. World Team, earning one of six spots to represent his country at the 2010 World Championships, where he finished 10th overall on rings in the elite world competition - the highest place by a U.S. member.

In April 2011 Wynn concluded his Ohio State career with a second consecutive NCAA Championships win on the still rings. Not only did he excel on rings, Wynn claimed All-America honors on high bar and parallel bars, placing eighth on both events. Wynn finished the NCAA meet with four All-American honors, also tying for fifth in the all-around competition. Brandon finished his OSU career as a six-time All-American and was named a 2011 finalist for the prestigious Nissen-Emery award.

Brandon also has a comprehensive understanding and deep commitment to holistic health and fitness. He has created and developed a piece of fitness equipment (now patent pending) and unique approach to living a healthy, fit, lifestyle.

A native of Voorhees, N.J., Brandon began gymnastics in 1995 at the age of seven when he became enamored by the excitement of the sport. With his impressive collegiate career behind him, Wynn has his sights set on the 2012 Olympic Games. Website: www.brandonwynn.net Twitter: @BrandonWynnGym
